

NATIONAL BANK OF ARIZONA GROWS ALONG WITH GLENDALE

Glendale Mayor helps break ground on new National Bank of Arizona branch/regional lending center.

Glendale, Ariz. (May 27, 2008) – As part of its commitment to building a stronger presence in the West Valley, National Bank of Arizona today began construction of its first Glendale branch and West Valley regional lending center.

Glendale Mayor Elaine Scruggs was on hand along with Glendale Councilmember Joyce Clark and State Representative Jerry Weiers to help break ground on the site.

Located at 9878 W. Camelback Road in Glendale, the 7,200-square-foot building will be home to a full-service branch in addition to the bank's West Valley regional lending center.

"There is tremendous business growth here in the West Valley," National Bank of Arizona Regional President Ken Kellaney said. "This new location provides our customers with an aggregate of banking resources under one roof."

The regional lending center will provide a full complement of financial services including business banking and commercial lending. The branch will offer two drive-through teller lanes, an ATM, safe deposit boxes and a night depository.

The branch opens for business in December, 2008.
